

DCRS PhD CONCENTRATIONS

The four concentrations we currently have are:

- Interpersonal Conflict
- Community Based Conflict
- Conflict in Organizations
- Global Conflict

The purpose of the concentrations is to allow students who are interested in an area to focus their electives within that area, which would become their concentration.

All Doctoral students are required to take a total of Seven electives within the Ph.D. program. Students opting to declare a concentration must choose five from the table below to fulfil their concentration, and 2 additional. The Concentrations Table below provides the lists of approved electives within each concentration. Students who do not desire to have a concentration may select any seven electives.

Monitoring Concentrations on Transcripts:

When the student decides to take a concentration, s/he will complete an online form for the Program Manager. (See Concentration Form below) It will be the student's responsibility to review the list of required and allowable electives for each concentration and take only those electives. As soon as the student has received final grades for the five electives for the concentration, the student will submit the form (without signatures) to the Program Manager. The Program Manager will review the Concentration Form to ensure the electives are correct, and that the student has taken and passed those electives. When the student applies for degree conferral, the program manager will review the student's verified concentration form in order to have the concentration listed on the final transcript. For questions on how to pick the concentrations or electives, please contact the Program Coordinator or the Program Manager.
